

Pact approved Tuesday

Teachers win 5 per cent raise

A FIVE PER CENT pay hike for Carmel Unified School District teachers was approved Tuesday by the board of education.

Involved is an $870-a-year boost to the district's average salary of $17,390. The pact covers the 1977-78 school term. The agreement was ratified unanimously Monday night by the Association of Carmel Teachers.

Negotiations between the teachers' association and the school administration began in March and resumed in September after a two-month hiatus in July and August.

THREE MAJOR ISSUES during the bargaining were salary, grievance procedures and teacher evaluations, both Robert E. Whitehead, assistant superintendent of instruction and personnel, and Bruce Stannard, president of the association, agreed.

Stannard noted that this is the first time there has been any procedure provided for negotiating teacher grievances. He said he was disappointed, however, that grievances will not be settled with binding arbitration.

"That was a point of concession," he said. Stannard said members of the teachers' association were "satisfied" with the five per cent pay increase.

The contract for 1977-78 was ratified unanimously at Monday's association meeting, attended by approximately 50 of the group's 158 members.

Road setback issue delayed

Proposed 100-foot setback boundaries along stretches of Carmel Valley Road will probably be scheduled for a public hearing in November by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, according to a source close to the board.

Robert Slimmon, the county zoning administrator, said delays in the survey of properties along the road has led to postponement of the hearing from mid-October to sometime in November.

The proposed setbacks were approved by the County Planning Commission Sept. 21. They would ban all new construction within 100 feet of the road. Existing structures would be exempt and construction variances for new structures could be granted in selected cases.

Carmel retirees told

Changes ahead for FBI

"I DON'T WORK for the United States government — I work for the people of the United States."

That is how Robert Bunch sees his job as senior resident agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Monterey.

Bunch, assigned there one year ago, was the guest speaker today at a meeting of the Sons in Retirement at the Rancho Canada Golf Club in Carmel Valley.

His topic was "The Past, Present and Future of the FBI."

In an interview before the speech, Bunch elaborated on the subject, offering some candid views and observations.

Conceding the "image" of the FBI has suffered, Bunch prefers not to dwell on the past.

"People were screaming for the FBI to do something back in the 1960s," he said, referring to the civil rights unrest of that decade, "but how soon they forget."

He said the bureau is criticized for surveillance on some militant organizations, but it gets little flak for keeping tabs on extremists like the American Nazi Party and the Ku Klux Klan.

MOST MONTEREY investigations related to "crimes emanating from military installations in the area . . . Fort Ord, the Defense Language Institute and Hunter-Liggett Military Reservation," he said.

The bureau would be far more effective in its work if citizens offered more support, he said.

"We've definitely lost some of our effectiveness because of people's attitudes nowadays. We got a lot more cooperation in the past from citizens. It hasn't affected me or any agents I know at all. We just do the job we're supposed to do," he added, however.

Bunch believes that changes in the bureau will result in agents' having clearer guidelines under which to conduct investigations. There will be a less "shadowy" approach in investigative procedures. But he hopes the new guidelines under Bureau Chief-designate Frank Johnson "will not be too restrictive." Johnson's Senate confirmation is expected this fall and he is to assume office Jan. 1, when Clarence Kelly resigns.

"It's popular now to limit the FBI's scope of investigation through the invasion of privacy act, for example," he said.

REFLECTING A BIT on the past, Bunch had high praise for the late bureau director, J. Edgar Hoover.

"I think the man did a fantastic job. The man was an expert," he said. "He built, unquestionably, the finest law enforcement

Lions Club hosts breakfast on Sunday

The community is invited to breakfast on Sunday with the Carmel Valley Lions Club at their annual fall fundraiser. Serving begins at 9 a.m. at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center and will continue until 1 p.m. The menu includes hot cakes, sausages, scrambled eggs, orange juice, coffee and milk. Donations are $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

Proceeds, according to club president Frank Catalano, will once again go toward local projects, including the CV Community Youth Center, the Lions' Little League team, FFA and 4-H.

Tickets are available from any Lions Club member or at the door.

Donations to the White Cane Day project last weekend exceeded the 1976 fund drive, reported Catalano. Lions and their wives, who manned posts throughout the Valley to sell token lapel pins for the sight conservation benefit, were Helen and Maury Nessel, Beth and Ralph Morrow, Phyllis and Frank Catalano, Doreen and Dick McKenzie, Mrs. Clifford Bolgard, Clarence Castro and Tony Ricigliano.

SPARKS FLY as Alex Weygers, right, demonstrates one phase of work involved in learning the art of blacksmithing to students who attended classes at the Weygers home on La Rancheria Road, in Carmel Valley.

Artist and survivor — Alex Weygers

By JULIE HANDGEN

ALEX WEYGERS is a survivor.

He says so. And he is surviving in style in the Carmel Valley home he fashioned from scraps of nature and pieces of jetsam.

He has lived in the Valley since 1944, when he acquired the three-acre tract on La Rancheria Rd.

Weygers, known throughout the Peninsula as a sculptor, engraver, inventor and blacksmith, is a nonstop talker who obviously enjoys sharing his personal philosophy.

With a "bellyful of bureaucracy" and an urge for adventure, Weygers came to America from the island of Java at the age of 25.

The spirited Dutchman, now in his 70s, had a background in mechanical engineering and shipbuilding in Holland, but said he soon discovered that creativity meant more to him than working at mundane jobs.

Weygers has parlayed his knowledge of the precise with his love for the esthetic into a life-style filled with both challenge and serenity.

"When an artist and an engineer go hand in hand, there is an incredible opening for opportunities," he explained with a sweeping gesture.

Some people jumped from windows just after the stock market crash of '29, but Weygers decided instead that was the perfect time to study art.

"Everyone was moping around and going crazy, losing their money," he recalled, "but I figured it was a good time to reassess the values in life, a milestone time.

"I was not a happy man in those years until I decided, why not earn as little money as possible instead of as much as possible," he laughed.

He acknowledged wryly that earning as "little as possible" was not all that difficult.

THE WEYGERS SCULPTURES are mostly of local stone and woods and reflect the exotic Balinese faces and forms so familiar to him.

They are scattered around the studio where he spends his days, a couple entwined in a loving embrace . . . two remorseful faces . . . a graceful hand clasping a branch. . . .

The works of art are not for sale, Weygers explained, not as long as the market is bringing exorbitant prices for sculpture of what he considers lesser quality.

He figures his works would have to be vastly expensive in comparison — a kind of tongue-in-cheek evaluation of contemporary artistic values.

"Besides," he says with a smile, "competition is a dirty word in my language."

Although Weygers became interested in the arts as a child, it was not until maturity that he realized his special aptitude was for sculpturing.

He was never inspired to work with color, with paints — being color-blind dulled that aspect — and preferred instead to concentrate on gradations, dimensions and tonal values.

His studio also houses a 19-century Acorn hand letterpress, and further behind the main house is his blacksmith, tool and carpentry shop.

THE WEYGERS property is a virtual haven for life's debris. He collects all that is unwanted by others, and saves it for future use.

"No one feels good about throwing things away," he muses, "so I take it and we both feel better."

Probably the most important single thing

He came from the isle of Java at age 25 in Weygers's life is being self-sufficient.

"Society is so geared away from nature that only a cataclysm will bring about change and only the survivors of the world will endure," he surmised.

He sees the blacksmith as a primary example of provincial independence, and likes teaching the trade to young people.

"The blacksmith was the man before the industrial age. I was afraid that interest in it might be just a fad, but now I think it is

Trevinos celebrate 50th anniversary

Reminiscing about their golden years were Dr. and Mrs. Salo N. Trevino at a recent reception given by their daughters, Marge Bennett and Buffie Collins, in the Fellowship Hall of the Carmel Valley Community Chapel.

Calvin Coolidge was president when Dorothy and Salo exchanged vows in Washington, D.C., where Dorothy was employed in Senator Sheppard's office. Salo courted her by letter from Austin College, in Sherman, Tex., where they had met, and where he held a job as a teaching assistant.

Charles Lindbergh was returning from Paris after his historic nonstop Atlantic solo flight; motion pictures were talking; Al Jolson was singing in The Jazz Singer; Babe Ruth hit 60 home runs; and the hit record was Ain't We Got Fun when the newlyweds moved to Chicago so Salo could continue his graduate studies at the University of Chicago.

Graduate work completed, Salo was offered a teaching position with the postgraduate division of Romance Languages at the university, and Chicago became their home for the next 25 years.

After that, they brought daughters Margaret and Elizabeth to Monterey, where Salo served as assistant academic dean of the Romanic-Germanic division of the Army Language School — now known as the Defense Language Institute — until 1957, when he joined the Foreign Service Institute of the State Department. During eight years of State Department service, the Trevinos were stationed in Washington, D.C., Mexico and Peru, where Salo was regional language supervisor for U.S.

embassies in South America. He returned to the U.S. briefly in 1962 to accept an honorary Doctorate of Literature from his alma mater, Austin College. He earned the Superior Honors Award from the State Department in 1964, and the highest honor given to a civilian, the Meritorious Honor Award, was bestowed upon him in 1965 when he retired.

The Trevinos chose Carmel Valley as their retirement home in order to enjoy their daughters, Marge and Buffie, and their 10 grandchildren.

Still another honor, the Distinguished Alumnus Award from the Pan American School in Kingsville, Tex., was presented in 1970.

Party invitations were linoleum block prints made by their granddaughter Laura Bennett, who was assisted by her sister, Susie, in the printing process. The girls also served refreshments and took charge of the guest book with their brother, Greg, and cousins Kathy, Tricia and Sharon Collins. Best wishes were presented through cards and flowers from Dorothy Collins Smith and her husband Ken, of San Diego; Elaine Bennett and husband Wes and their daughter, in Idaho; Ron Bennett and his bride-to-be, Debbie Young, also of Idaho; and a phone call from Saudi Arabia from Julie Bennett Dreher and her husband, Jeff.

The numerous guests were received in the hall, beautifully decorated with gold and yellow streamers and clusters of white wedding bells. White candles set in Peruvian gold-leaf candlesticks adorned the main table, while bright clusters of yellow and white carnations arranged with sprays of baby's breath decorated the side tables. A large sheet cake with the inscription "Happy Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary, Dorothy and Salo" was cut by the celebrants.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Collins, of Sunnyvale; Elizabeth Schulte, of San Jose; Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Lochridge and sons; Mrs. Norman Friddle and Mrs. Mabel Love, of Pacific Grove; and Milre Lisso, of Costa Rica.

Luau on Holman Road

A full moon shining overhead was the final touch needed to transform the Holman Road residence of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Klemek into a tropical paradise. Hawaiian luau guests were guided by flickering tiki torches to the "Isle of Klemek," where they found man-made sandy beaches and palm trees in a lush setting of flowers and fishnets. A flower-filled outrigger canoe floated among the tropical blossoms in the pool, and gems sparkled in a treasure chest.

Beachboys served drinks from a little grass shack until a Hawaiian war chant signaled the guests to gather to watch the pig as it was dug from the "imu."

Loretta Klein and Don Sweiss won prizes for the best costumes. A hula contest followed the dinner.

Cohosts presenting leis to guests as they arrived were Mr. and Mrs. Gary Klemek,

Barracuda Boosters meet Monday

Members of the Barracuda Boosters Club are invited to attend the meeting on Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Carmelo School library for an election of new officers.

The following slate was presented at last week's board meeting by the nominating committee: Chuck McKay, president; Harold Mason, vice president; Blair Buckner, secretary; Linda Lazanoff, treasurer; Bitten Falge and Amelia Franke, team mothers; Sue Lloyd, ribbons and trophies; Nancy Hardy, recorder; Sandi Cisneros, ways and means; Beverly Paik, newsletter; Paul Schekler, publicity; John Radon, director of meets. Nominations also will be accepted from the floor.

The end-of-the-year awards barbecue brought a large number of swimmers and divers and their families to Toro Park for a potluck cookout in the Buckeye area. Highlight of the afternoon was the presentation of plaques to Barracudas who had been tapped for an outstanding season.

Named most improved divers were Amanda Mallory, Laura Flaegen, Jill Mink and Donna King. Diving coach's awards went to Allison Hardy and Staci Stainbrook.

Selected for the swim coaches' awards were Tuck Whitesides and Erika Radon (8/U); Mike Falge and Jennifer Buckner (9/10); Mike Hardy and Sarah Hicks (11/12); Art Strum and Maureen Falge (13/14); and Roger Salyer and Stacey Hicks (15/18).

The most improved swimmers were Brian Mullen and Sandy Morris (8/U); Jamie Olsen and Shelia Mullen (9/10); Kent Nybakken and Kristin Sheckler (11/12); Dave Mason and Liz Weiss (13/14); and George Lockwood and Emily White (15/18).

'If anyone tries to intimidate you, do it right back,' says Weygers more than that," he remarked.

Weygers has written two books, now in their fifth printing, devoted to his work, The Modern Blacksmith and The Making of Tools, and is working on a third primer about repairing tools.

He is also involved in writing a book about sculpturing, a labor spanning the past ten years.

His views on the "excellence of hand-work" were published in a vignette in the July 1976 Bicentennial edition of the Smithsonian magazine, describing the recycling of "junk" materials.

Weygers admits that he has earned unexpected rewards from his literary efforts and appreciates the extra income.

"My God," he exclaimed in some wonderment, "Marion (his wife) and I go out to dinner now at the drop of a hat — something we couldn't do for years!"

HIS INVENTIVE MIND is continuously toying with how to make things better, or simply how to make things.

During the final year of World War II, he drafted plans for construction of a vertical-takeoff aircraft he labels a "glorified helicopter."

He was awarded a patent on the idea, but contact with 13 airplane companies led to a dead end.

All of the firms, he said, insisted he sign contracts which in essence stated that the companies "might have already thought of the idea."

Weygers, of course, refused to sign away his creation. The project was in limbo.

He said he learned several months ago that a toy manufacturer is releasing a toy helicopter based on the principle he conceived.

He believes that when the toy is introduced at Christmastime this year at $25 each, new life may be breathed into his project.

"I like to teach and I like to share my thoughts and ideas. I have no secrets," he shrugs, again espousing his laissez-faire approach to life.

WEYGERS, STRONG and sure of his own capabilities, hates to be intimidated.

"There is one rule," he advises, shaking his index finger. "If anyone tries to intimidate you, do it back twice as hard and see how fast they back off."

The best illustration of that sage advice was when Weygers received his citizenship papers in 1941.

"The last question I was asked was, 'How do you like America?' " he remembered.

"I couldn't believe such a question — how do I like America!" he exclaimed. "I got angrier and angrier and I thought for a long time before answering."

"Finally, I shouted back, yes, I like America, but I banged my fist on the table and everything danced off the top and there was a total hush in the room," he continued.

"I told them again, yes, I like America, but the bureaucracy here is getting worse and worse, and I banged my fist again," he said.

"And, do you know what happened? The interviewer leaned across the table and very quietly replied, 'Mr. Weygers, we need more people here like you.' "

ALEX WEYGERS and his wife, Marion, sit in a glow of sunshine behind the unique, free-form table he devised for their home on La Rancheria Rd., in Carmel Valley. The table is attached to a pedestal mounted in the floor and can easily be turned to accommodate any use.

Free flu shots offered in Carmel Valley

Free influenza vaccinations will be offered by the Monterey County Health Department on Thursday, Oct. 27, at locations in Carmel and Carmel Valley.

The clinics are scheduled at the Carmel Foundation, Lincoln and Eighth Streets, Carmel, from 1:30 to 4 p.m., and at Del Mesa Carmel, Carmel Valley Rd., from 9 to 11 a.m.

The shots are available to anyone 55 and older and to those with chronic medical conditions.

This season's vaccine offers protection against the

A-Victoria virus strain of 1975 and the B-Hong Kong strain of 1972, the health department said.

The vaccine will not contain protection against Swine Influenza virus because no cases of "swine flu" were identified here during 1976, it said.

There is no charge for the vaccine, but donations will be accepted with proceeds used to purchase equipment for the Senior Citizen and Nursing Service project, a new health screening service.

Wellesley alumnae to meet

The Monterey Bay Wellesley Club has scheduled its first meeting of the year on Friday at 1 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hicks, Fourth and Lopez, in Carmel.

The program will be presented by Mary Ellen Hicks and Louise Zook, both of whom attended college reunions in June.

Also giving a report will be Mrs. Allen Waldo, who represented the club earlier this month at the 1977 Alumnae Council, held annually on the Wellesley campus in Massachusetts.

Wellesley College alumnae new to the area are invited to attend the meeting. For further information, phone Marion Homer, 625-2303, or Marjorie Carson, 624-8261.

O'Neal nears degree

John O'Neal, raised in Carmel Valley and a graduate of Carmel High School, has completed assignments leading to a master's degree in art from Fullerton State University.

O'Neal, 26, exhibited 24 pieces of pottery Sunday for a university examining board and for guests and relatives. All of the pieces were sold within the first hour of the show.

O'Neal is married to the former Mary Fries, also a graduate of Carmel High School. They previously lived in Honolulu while attending the University of Hawaii.

PADRE SPORTS

By ELIZABETH M. DARE
Carmel High Sportswriter

THE KING CITY MUSTANGS overcame the Carmel Padres Friday night in King City by a score of 34-12. The football game was Carmel's league opener.

Padre Coach Frank Lynch said the loss was due to a series of errors on Carmel's part.

The first two touchdowns belonged to King City — the first from Jerry McCoy, coming in from the Carmel 10 at the beginning of the second period. The other, later in the same quarter, was made by Glen Justice, who intercepted a Carmel pass at the 50 and took the ball through the end zone.

With 1:28 remaining in the half, Carmel turned in its first touchdown on a pass from quarterback Frank Lucido to his brother, John.

In the first two minutes of the fourth, King City delivered two more scores. Carmel's final score of the evening was again made by John Lucido on a hand-off from Rick Breneman, who plunged from the one-yard line.

Coach Lynch felt that juniors Mike Harney and Paul St. Germaine played exceptionally well on the defense.

CARMEL'S GIRLS' tennis team opened its league season last Thursday by beating Gonzales High School 7-0 on Carmel's courts. The top two Padre singles players, Cathy Broderick and Andrea Jacobsen, won by default and all other team members came off with decisive wins.

Senior Cathy Carr said, "We have an excellent team this year, and with the help of our new coach, Barbara Snopkowski, we're looking forward to playing Santa Catalina." Carmel will play host to Pacific Grove today and will travel to Santa Catalina on Tuesday.

The Padre team consists of the following players:
Singles—Cathy Broderick, Andrea Jacobsen, Jan Tallett.
Doubles—Cheri Threadgill and Kristen Tibbetts; Cathy Carr and Patti Doran; Heidi England and Elizabeth Vout; Krisi Luster and Ann McDonald.

THE CARMEL VARSITY volleyball squad extended its record to 5-0 with a win over Monterey. The Toreadores, last year's undefeated league champions, fell to the Padres with scores of 9-15, 15-10, 15-6.

The play on the Monterey team centered around senior Susan Hughes, who provided a consistent barrage of effective blocks and spikes. But the offensive play of Carmel's Tami Williams and Jill Ricketts was enough to secure the fifth consecutive win for the Padres.

The JVs also won their match with a final tally of 15-7, 15-10.

THE GIRLS' SWIM team won its meet last week against Harbor High School with a score of 122-49. The frosh squad also posted a victory, 117-51.

agency in the world."

He said Hoover has "been the butt of unfair criticism," that "no one yet has been as strong as Hoover."

"For instance," he said, "Hoover was vehemently opposed to the incarceration of Japanese in this country during World War II, but he never got credit for that stand."

WHAT ABOUT THE future of the FBI? There is a good, healthy future with changing priorities, he believes.

"Bigger fish will be targeted and bigger fish will be caught," he predicted, speaking of organized crime.

He said the FBI has made heartening gains against organized crime in the past decade. He reported that the bureau made 1,500 related arrests in 1976 compared to just 197 in 1967.

"Organized crime, white-collar crime and terrorism" are the fastest-growing menaces to society, Bunch remarked.

What are FBI agents really like, stereotypes of the television and movie actors, or real people? And, does the bureau police its own?

Bunch emphatically asserted that agents cannot be pigeonholed as to type and personality, that no agents fit one mold.

"I'm willing to bet that you wouldn't get 10 stock opinions from a group of 10 agents at any given time on any controversial subjects, such as gun control and capital punishment," he said.

Bunch said the bureau thoroughly investigates its own employees. The agents are not under civil service, belong to no union and do not have the right to take the Fifth Amendment.

ON A MATTER of national interest and controversy, Bunch commented on the assassination of the late John F. Kennedy.

"I would be shocked and amazed if there was more than one little malcontent pip-squeak like Lee Harvey Oswald involved," he declared.

He acknowledged that many persons seem to want to believe there were "conspiracies" in connection with the assassinations of John and Robert Kennedy, but he discounted theories advanced by authors like Mark Lane and Richard Gregory.

BUNCH INDICATED THAT one reason the FBI image is in a decline is because the public is "much more antiestablishment, antigovernment" than before, possibly due to the Watergate scandal.

"And," he remarked, shaking his head, "the FBI didn't have a damn thing to do with Watergate. In fact, the FBI pushed the Watergate investigation."

Bunch indicated that perhaps the bureau has taken a lot of blame for autonomous actions by past government administrations.

The primary function of the bureau is dependent on what America really wants in crime control, the agent said.

"It seems very clear that people want something done about crime, but it is people who have to clean up crime. Crime happens in areas that have a very high tolerance for it," he concluded.

CASTLE BUILDING WAS a father-and-son venture for John Campbell and his son, Johnny. They live in Carmel. Johnny wasn't the only small fry involved Sunday — a three-year-old was listed among the members of one winning group.

Valley sand castle w

FEWER ENTRIES and a smaller crowd at the 16th renewal of the Great Sand Castle Contest of Carmel on Sunday were ascribed to the wraps on publicity about the off beat event.

"I think the short notice kept the crowds down," said Donald R. Brown, grand marshal at the contest. Hoping to avoid large crowds, officials withheld the contest date until last Thursday.

An estimated 5,000 persons came to watch. They strolled the 1.5-mile length of Carmel Beach as castle builders worked feverishly to meet the 2 p.m. judging deadline. The team of 10 judges viewed 244 entries.

At the 1976 contest, Brown said there were 350 entries. The crowd last year was estimated at 10,000. Brown said the large crowd caused traffic snarls and, in a few cases, disturbed some homeowners with property near the beach area.

Carmel Police Chief William Ellis, himself a judge in the contest, said there were no serious problems Sunday other than the larger-than-normal influx of cars.

THE TOP PRIZE went to the creators of Flying Worm, a winged wormlike creation etched in the sand. The winners were given a shovel painted gold.

"It was dynamite," said a jubilant Phred Ford, 24, a Carmel Valley man who was part of the team. "I built a sand castle when I was 10, but this was the first time I had been back since then."

The winners included Sherry Meyer, of Carmel Valley, Vera Martin, of San and Roddy Padgham, also from Carmel Valley. His seven-year-old son, Frayn, given the ceremonial shovel.

The contest theme award was claimed by a group that called itself "Ur 77s." Unnamed individuals were given a shell for their entry Ziggurat at Ur. The theme Sunday was West Asian architecture.

To brighten the day for losers, castle judges customarily designated an entry as the winner of the Sour Grapes award. The 1977 winning loser was Buddha Meets Big Mac. The sand sculptures were Marvin Denmark and Robin K. of Carmel, Janet Ealey and Michael Y. of Monterey, and Jim Spitz, of Mar

"We have no sour grapes about getting the Sour Grapes award," declared Koontz. "We're real happy about it."

A total of 35 winning entries were selected in the remaining two categories. Winners in the "advanced sand" category included:

Xerxes Tomb, Monterey Peninsula Jaycees; Please Don't Squeeze the didate, Clark Struve, Toshia Struve, Geisen, David Geisen, Jackson Booth, Mosque, Monterey Gym Center.

House of the Dragon; Taj, Old Carmel; Sphinx with Nose, Alan Arellano, Peterson, Don Carwin; Crown of the Castle, the Werner F. Schmidt; Pickle Palace, Joe, Chris and Anne; Jim Lambert, Marcia Carson.

Vera Martin, of San Diego, and her 10-year-old son, Frayne, was named the winner of the contest.

The theme award was claimed by a sandcastle called "Ur 77s." The sandcastle was given a conch shell as a trophy. The entry "Ziggurat at Ur. The sandcastle was West Asiatic architecture."

On the day for losers, sandcastles were customarily designate one winner of the Sour Grapes award. The winning loser was titled "Big Mac." The sand sculptors were given a conch shell as a trophy.

"I'm a sour grapes about getting the award," declared Miss Vera Martin, "but I'm real happy about it."

35 winning entries were submitted. The remaining two categories were "advanced sand box" and "novice sand pile."

The San Luis Valley in Colorado is one of the great potato-raising areas in the world. The flat, sandy fields raise huge crops of irrigated potatoes. Every farm has a row of earth-covered, semi-sunken potato storage barns.

Most farms also have horse and cattle barns. Livestock can be fed on surplus potatoes, reject potatoes, potatoes for which the price isn't good enough to sell. We bought a Thoroughbred gelding in the San Luis Valley once. He was five years old, fat, sweet natured, and had a very, mellow personality. He had been raised on a diet of practically all potatoes. He looked beautiful . . . sensible . . . with just enough Thoroughbred pizzazz to let you think you were on a spirited horse.

Being a beginner at owning or riding Thoroughbreds, we were appalled at his diet. We took him out of the San Luis Valley and fed him on a diet of alfalfa and oats — just like real horses get. He got thin. Worse, he turned into a tiger. He jittered. He spooked at his own shadow. He wasn't much fun to ride any more and he acted like such an idiot he injured himself several times. We did serious training with expensive coaches. He never became quite as nice as he was on the potato farm.

But he taught us something about Thoroughbred horses and something about feeding them for ordinary, everyday purposes. Feed them lots and lots — of nuthin'! Fill a Thoroughbred with all the bulk he'll take and the less nutritious it is, the better.

Thoroughbreds are born dumb. For 300 years they've been bred to win races and to do other dumb things that smart horses would think twice about.

Thoroughbreds have more red blood cells per cubic centimeter of blood than regular horses. They have more nerve endings per square inch of skin. They're what we call "hot blooded." That means they have a shorter fuse to explode on.

Thoroughbreds also tend to be skinny. They're built long and lean. It's hard to put weight on a Thoroughbred and if you do get some flesh built up, the stupid horse is just as likely to fret it off again as to work it off.

Nonetheless, Thoroughbreds make superior riding horses. If you can get them to work for you, they give their all — and then some. That lean, lanky body is the right build for polo, jumping, dressage, Three Day Eventing and other horse competitions.

Even without "going in for competition," a horse owner is likely to find that riding a Thoroughbred is habit forming. After you get used to riding long-strided dynamite, little rounded plugs are just boring.

Except for the last weeks of fitting for high-powered competitions, grain is not what a Thoroughbred should eat. The books that recommend grain — one-fourth to one-half pound of oats per 100 pounds of body weight — are talking about regular horses.

Feed corn to a Quarter Horse and he gets fat and sassy. Feed corn to a Thoroughbred and he gets sweaty and washy.

Feed oats to a Morgan and he'll pull logs for you. Feed one little grain of oats to a Thoroughbred and he'll walk around the ceiling of his stall. "Ohh!" gasp visitors to his barn. "He's feeling his oats, isn't he?"

My San Luis Valley Thoroughbred was almost perfect on a diet of potatoes. That's all starch. A human being who ate such a starchy diet would be flabby and sluggish. Which only goes to show that not all horses are human.

There are bacteria in a horse's gut that digest pure cellulose for him and turn it into

Two-man show opens at Zantman

Of Sea and Ships, a two-man show of paintings by Thomas Wells, A.I.C.H., and E. John Robinson, opens with an artists' reception Saturday, Oct. 15, 6-9 p.m. at Zantman Art Galleries, Mission and Sixth, Carmel. Both artists will be present.

The initials behind Wells's name stand for the Association of International Cape Horners, an organization of all the sailors who have rounded Cape Horn on sailing ships. Because the last square-rigger made the trip in 1949, the number of members diminishes steadily.

Wells interrupted his art studies at Yale University as a young man to sail to Greenland and Australia and around Cape Horn on four-masted ships like the Effie M. Morrissey and the Passat. He then returned to Yale to obtain his BFA degree.

After many years as a commercial artist, Wells became a successful marine painter. His paintings are exhibited in maritime museums and the Kennedy Galleries in New York.

Among his paintings included in this show are Port of Call, Pamir Below Campbell Island, Lindquist's Watch, Tropic of Capricorn, Force 7 and Effie M. Morrissey on the Blossomville Coast.

Robinson, a native of Oregon, studied art at the California College of Arts and Crafts and San Francisco State College.

He is the author of two books, Marine Painting in Oil and The Seascape Painter's Problem Book, as well as a teacher.

Among his paintings in this show are New Storm, The Mendocino Coast, September Song, Special Moment, Before Daybreak, Foam and Froth and Tide Pools.

Gallery hours are 11 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday. For more information, phone 624-8314.

Install a money trap in your attic.

INSULATING CAN SAVE OVER $50 A YEAR IN HEATING COSTS.

Heat rises. That's why the attic is where most heat-loss happens. The cost of heat keeps rising, too. That's why, more than ever, it pays to insulate. Insulating an attic can save the average homeowner at least $50 a year in heating costs. That means insulation will not only pay for itself, but will save money...and energy...too.

PG&E will make insulating your home easier by arranging free estimates from two qualified contractors. If you request it, we'll inspect the work when it's done. And we'll give you a certificate of installation to R-19 standards.

So if you want help in contractor referrals, or more information, call PG&E's Energy Conservation Center, toll free, at 800-792-8000, Monday through Friday, 8 AM to 8 PM. (If your telephone area code is 805, call collect to 415-543-2073.) Or fill out and mail the coupon or return it with your bill payment.

Do it now, before winter sets in. So you can feel warm all over about the money you'll save.

usable horse feed. The British feed chopped straw (chaff) as a large part of a Thoroughbred's diet. We know several Thoroughbreds on light working schedules that have done just fine on summer pasture in California — all the scruffy brown grass and empty wild oats they could eat. We fed a Thoroughbred this way last summer, supplementing it with about enough alfalfa to put under your left thumbnail. He gained weight and a reputation as a gentle horse.

It's the kind of thing an owner has to keep an eagle eye upon but the more low-nutritive feed a Thoroughbred eats, the happier he'll be. On a low-nutrition diet, however, large amounts of time must be devoted to eating.

This means that the Thoroughbred must have his own enclosure and must have food in front of him at all times. Free feeding would founder a naturally fat horse, but is needed by many Thoroughbreds.

Some high-bulk diets the Thoroughbred owner might consider: alfalfa plus enough bran to keep the calcium-phosphorus ratio even, oat hay, alfalfa molasses meal, chopped oat hay molasses meal, beet pulp (available at feed stores or sugar refineries), whole rice (available in the Sacramento area), barley hay, wheat hay, rye hay, Sudan grass hay or shredded sorghum fodder. And, of course, potatoes.

Carmelo School Halloween fest scheduled for Friday, Oct. 28

A favorite Halloween haunt, the annual Carmelo School Halloween Carnival, promises to be filled with attractions for hobgoblins of all ages who attend the affair scheduled for Friday, Oct. 28, at 6 p.m.

Joan Rossi, carnival chairman, invites

John Scott, of Valley, dead at 69

John Scott, owner and operator of Scott's Silver and Leather Store in Carmel, died Sunday at Community Hospital, after suffering an apparent heart attack. He was 69.

Scott was born Oct. 20, 1907, in Dietz, Wyo. He had lived on the Peninsula since 1938. He made his home on Carmel Valley Road.

An U.S. Army veteran from World War II, Scott's hobbies included breeding and racing pigeons. He was an organizer of the Monterey Bay Area Racing Pigeon Club.

He is survived by his wife, Viola A. Scott, of Carmel Valley, and a sister, Louise Kiefling, of Sheridan, Wyo.

Private services have been held at Farlinger

Funeral Home. Cremation followed and the ashes were scattered at sea.

The family asked that memorial contributions be given to the Central Mission Trails Heart Association or to the donor's favorite charity.

Valley Polo Club takes Menlo tourney

A team representing the Carmel Valley Polo Club won the Menlo Invitational Tournament hosted Oct. 1 and 2 in Menlo Park by the Menlo Circus Club.

Eight teams from northern California joined in the competition. The event was the last tournament of the polo season.

John Walworth and Pat Herman, both from the Valley club, were teamed with Glenn Atkinson and Patrick Brent, Menlo club players. They defeated teams from Santa Rosa and Menlo in round-robin play.

During championship play, Carmel Valley downed Modesto, 2-1, and Portola Valley, 3-2, to claim the tournament championship.

Members of the Valley team included Richard Collins, Joshua Hall, Milton Bristow and Fay Humphries, representing Pebble Beach. Pebble Beach lost two games by one goal in the consolation round-robin play.

Sue Sally Hale, of Carmel Valley, and Mary A. Walton, of the Robert Louis Stevenson polo team, joined friends from the Central Valley club in second consolation play.
